Santa Cruz La Laguna, Guatemala
www.amigosdesantacruz.org
Manos Cruceñas is a social enterprise store founded by Amigos de Santa Cruz has been working in the communities of Santa Cruz la Laguna since 1998. The store opened its doors in 2012 and currently provides employment opportunities to over 70 indigenous Mayan artisans across the six small communities that make up Santa Cruz la Laguna on Lake Atitlan.

Our artisans learn their skills through sewing, beading, weaving and crotchet training programs in the CECAP Vocational Training Center run by Amigos de Santa Cruz. The store provides a direct opportunity for program graduates to begin earning an income from their craft. For many of our artisans, this is the first time in their life that they are earning an income of their own.

In addition to earning a fair wage for their products, our artisans also receive non-economic support. Nutrition classes, women’s empowerment workshops and clean water filters help to improve their quality of life in the home.

Your purchase of Manos Cruceñas products provides opportunities which are otherwise unavailable to the indigenous women of Santa Cruz.

Thank you for supporting Santa Cruz artisans and their families!

Jaspe

Jaspe (pronounced “haspeh”) is a traditional Guatemalan cotton/cotton-blend/rayon textile that is woven on a foot-loom. The fabric is traditionally used for women’s skirts.

Jaspe patterns are created by a series of faint stripes formed by the arrangement of light, medium, and dark warp threads or by twisting together 2 threads of different colors. The fabric often has knotted “Ikat” designs featuring local plants and animals.

Huipil

The huipil (pronounced “wheepeel”) is the traditional Guatemalan women’s blouse. The basic fabric is usually handwoven on a backstrap loom and then embellished with hand or machine embroidery. The Story of the Backstrap Loom Backstrap weaving has been practiced by indigenous artisans in the highlands of Guatemala for generations. According to Mayan mythology, weaving originated with the moon goddess Ixchel, who is often depicted seated at a backstrap loom.

Walk through any indigenous town in Guatemala today and you can see women weaving in their homes. One end of the loom is attached to a post or tree using a rope, and the other is attached to the weaver’s body through a strap that wraps around the back, giving the technique its name. Most women begin learning to weave around age 7.

24 of our artisans use backstrap looms to create products for our store and clothing for use in their homes. The designs and colors used are often specific to a particular village. In Santa Cruz, those colors include deep red with yellow, purple and blue triangles embroidered to represent the volcanoes towering over Lake Atitlan. Local designs are worn proudly to identify each woman as an individual within her culture and her community, as well as communicating traditional Maya beliefs about the universe.
